Preaching from the Pews begins
(DMin cohort)

June is almost here and the Preaching from the Pews course for lay preaching that is the basis for my doctoral project is close to kicking off! We will meet each Monday night in June and the first two Monday nights in July for an hour and a half of learning, discussing and practicing preaching. I hope to have 8-10 participants from Central and several other local churches in the group.

Each participant will write and deliver a sermon based on the lectionary while I'm on sabbatical this fall as a way of putting the course "into action." I will work with each person as they craft their sermon to give feedback, help and encouragement. We will then meet one more time in November for a final reflection session.

If you are interested in joining the Preaching from the Pews cohort, please let me know soon. There is some paperwork to fill out for Phillips (basic info agreeing to participate, etc) that needs to be on file. If you know someone who might want to be part of this, tell them and give them my info. They can be part of any church; they don't need to be Disciples or mainline. The goal is to create a model that can work in a variety of small, rural churches!
