I checked the weather app on my phone just a few minutes ago and am almost giddy about the temperatures this week! Highs in the 80's? In July? In Texas?

I'm not a huge fan of the heat. I appreciate the longer daylight summer brings us, but I could do without 100 degree days. Sunburns and sweating aren't my idea of a good time. And yet, it's part of the seasons of our world. We can't have fall or winter or spring without summer as well.

Isn't that how life is? We all have different seasons we live through. Some are fun and are full of wonder like when new plants emerge in spring. Some seasons are like winter – quiet and slow (I'm thinking a Texas winter!) Some seasons are seasons of scorching and burning – when we have our feet to the fire and everything seems to be sapping our energy and strength. And some seasons are like the fall – when we shed things that aren't helpful or useful as we wait for what comes next.

It may be summer in Texas, but this week's reprieve reminds me that nothing in this world lasts forever. If you are struggling, it won't last forever. If you are on top of the world, that won't last forever either. What does last forever is our God. And with God there is grace and love and hope and peace that will last forever.

Trust in the Lord, for God is faithful!
